THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1878. The telegram we published the day before yesterday, stating that "the Russians refuse to evacuate Burgos and Kirk-Kelessil," requires a few words of explanation. Kirk-Kilissa and Tchatal Burgas are two towns on the borders of the newly-formed province of "Eastern Roumelia," and, the difficulty referred to may be a dispute between the Russian and Turkish authorities is to whether places are to be handed over at all to the Ottoman forces. Were the difficulty a mere delay on the part of the Russian troops in the evacuation of the towns, the affair would hardly have been considered worth a telegram. It Robson that of Prince Cassimir. Both will assist the reader to a clear comprehension of the present position of affairs if we briefly trace the arrangements for the evacuation of the conquered territory by the Russian troops agreed upon at the Berlin Congress, and set out in the minutes of the proceedings of that great diplomatic body published in a recent blue book. By the Treaty of St. Stephano it was provided that Bulgaria should be occupied by a force 50,000 Russians, at the most, for a period of two years—these men to be maintained at the expense of "Bold Gendarmes." the Principality. This arrangement of course applied to the Bulgaria proposed by the Russians, extending from the Danube to the Mediterranean. Congress rolled back the boundaries of the proposed Bulgaria to the Balkan mountains, and created the autonomous province of "Eastern Roumelia." also reduced the term of the Russian occupation of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelis to nine months,-dating, we Treaty. Consequently if Kirk-Kilissa and Tchatal Burgas are properly considered by the Russian authorities to be within the boundaries of the new province of "Eastern Roumelia," they will continue to hold possession of those towns for another seven or eight months, and then hand them over, not to the Turkish troops, but to the native militie fall on Monday. This afteration derand entrusted with its protection. The tainly will not suit the convenience of residin question is not likely to result in any majority; but as the news regarding the serious complications and it is somewhat changes is only as yet telegraphic, it would does not indicate pretty clearly what advantages in point of convenience against places do and do not belong to the new the advantages of accelerated transit. province.

than either of the two quoted stated that as soon as the Russians evacuated these lines Baker Pasha would complete their defences and commence the construction of another line of defence near Constantinople. The Russian authorities baving now given up so many points of advantage to the Turks in the neighbourhood of Constantinople, the probability is increased of the complete evacuation of Turkish soil without further serious diffigulty. At the same time, however, the Bulgarian forts have passed into Russian occupation. The British fleet has withdraws to Artaki, on the southern coart of the Sea of Marmara until the Russians have left Adrianople, when it is to be presumed it will retire to the Mediter-alarm on the part of the community here as to the insecurity of life and property in this Colony. The Administration is about to receive such assistance in the suppression of crime in Hongkong will, it is to be hoped, appal even those daring scoundrels who have lately so much terrified us. In a Manila daily newspaper, the Comercio of the 7th instant, we read the following welcome "We learn that the intelligence: Spanish despatch vessel, Marques Duero, will shortly leave for China with the object of assisting in the apprehension of the bandits who recently committed the robbery at Hongkong, reported in these columns." Considering the hard things that have been said of late here regarding the Spanish Government, particularly that branch of it which flourishes at Manila, we regard this spontaneous despatch of the transport in question for the protection of this Colony a most praiseworthy and unexpected exhibition of good feeling. The British Navy possesses few such vessels as the Marques del Duero, and those of her description we do own are carefully "laid up" out of harm's way by a sordid and short-sighted Government. Under the guns of the Marques del Duero (we believe she has two, at the lowest calculation) we are confident a feeling of security will be speedily re-established in this Colony. Our only fear is that the Marques is not coming here for our protection, but merely to add to the lustre of her name (and exterior wood work generally) over at Kowloon or round at Aberdeen.

ALLEGED LARCENY BY A EUROPEAN. William Peterson, a seaman unemployed, was charged on suspicion with ateaung $30 in silver, the property of another seaman named James Daly, at the London Inn. It appears that both defendant and complainant came down in the French Mail together from Shanghai. They had been shipmates together. Complainant slept in the same room as Mr Sykes, the proprietor of the London Inn, and defendant slept on a sofa in a room on the opposite side of the passage. They wanted to get to the colonies, but defendant only had $4 or $5, in cash and a watch, and complainant come $55. They could not get a passage for less than $80 each. Yesterday about 11 a.m. complainant went to his room, lay down on his bed and fell asleep. He hung his coat on the bed and in the inside pocket he had 230 in silver. At about | past 4 he was called for dinner, and he then found the money was gone.

James Walter Sykes, the proprietor of the "London Inn," was called and gave evidence as to seeing the defeadant sitting on the complainant's bed and hearing a dollar fall on the floor.

The case was remanded until the 21st instant.

> SUPREME COURT. IN ORIMINAL SESSIONS

The October Sessions commenced to-day. There are seven cases on the Calendar, including the charge of larceny and embezzle. ment (five counts) against Mr Huffam. The following gentlemen comprised the Jury to-day :- Messrs P. J. E. Bohlschan. C. S. Haden, J. P. Pereira, C. Beutmann, I. Juster, S. P. Johannes, and O. E. Pages The Attorney General (the Hon. G. Phill-lippo) prosecuted. Regina v. Yan Aluk. The prisoner, a boy 9 years of age, was indicted for stealing a bangle from the leg of child. There was very little evidence to convict the lad, and the Jury, giving him the benefit of the doubt, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Regina v. Wong Atali The prisoner, a woman, was indicted on two counts (1) with administering a stupefying drug to a woman named Tsan Amui at 44 Peel Street, and (2) with stealing sundry articles of jawellery from the person of Tsan Amui. The facts of the case are simply as follows : Tean Amui, a woman living under the protection of a foreigner, was invited by the prisoner to partake of a meal. Two men were in their company. She knew no more until she found herself at the Hospital, when she discovered that she had been robbed of jewellery and money to a considerable amount. The men made good their escape, but the prisoner was arrested and charged with being cognizant of the whole affair. The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Dr von der Horek gave evidence as to the appearance of the woman who had been polsoned.

The Jury found the prisoner not guilty. Regina v. Cheng Achun. The prisoner was indicted on four counts with larceny from a dwelling house, and cutting and wounding a Sikh constable in the execution of his duty. The prisoner was stopped by the constable and questioned as to his business, when he stabbed the constable in the neck with a fan-dagger. The Jury found the prisoner guilty, and he was sent to one year's hard labour on the first count, and 3 years' penal servitude on the other counts. His Lordship commended the constable as an efficient officer and a brave man, and said he would bring the case to the notice of H. E. the Governor. The sessions were then adjourned until

UAMPAGNE. .

To reach the Provencel home of Sir Charles Dilke it is desirable to leave London by the morning mail. In this way one will contrive to reach La Bainte Campagne on the following day in time for that meal which Englishmen call luncheon, Frenchmen dejouner, and Provengeux peet sants diner. Spinning merrily southwards. we become conscious that we are in a new climate. Gloomy London and doubtful Paris left far behind, the air grows lighter and easier to breathe, the blue sky-vault is loftier, the vegetation puts on another character. Although tearing along at express speed, we have time to note the bright glare of the sun and prevalence of dactus, aloes, and other of the fleshy plants specially formed to exist in despite of sun and drought. Arriving at Marseilles at 9.39 a.m., we almost immediately push on for Toulon the Portsmouth of France. nder a blazing sun we roll on through that part of France which boasts the most African temperature - a land producing olives and capers, pomegranates and branges, evacuation or otherwise of the two towns ents here, though it may be a gain to the the palm and the tamaris. At 12 40 p.m. we arrive at Toulon, with its great happhire bay dotted with irouglads, like storm. clouds in a summer sky. The landstape on the north is arid and har-h with its range of lofty calcareous hills gleaming with blinding whiteness in the full glare of moonday. Glittering as show mountains, Mount Faron and its brethren bas never worn a anow-cap in the memory of man. Gatint, white, and inhospitable, these precipitous hills are crowned by fortifications, The top of Mount Faron now britles with batteries frowning down on the works on the right, pitched on the site of those which made the fame of Napoleon as an officer of artillery. From this almost tropical splendour out mide it is an impressive transition into the deep gloom of the interior of La Sainte Campagne. For an instant the dim religious light due to closed jalousies appears Cimmerian darkness, and the plue piusfore of Auguste is undistinguishable from surrounding objects. Clattering across a small hall paved with red tiles one enters the cell of the proprietor. From an armchair in a small apartment, with a wall-paper of maddening design, on which peacocks, birds of paradise, and hollyhocks dance a species of infernal cancan, rises a bine-eyed brownbearded man, clad in a suit of soft creamcoloured material. There is no great wealth of furniture leavis bizarre retreat; merely two armchairs and a table, some fencing-foils and masks, a handsome clock of the First Empire, and a couple of old engravings, one representing the landing of the English at Toulon, and the other the evacuation and destruction of that stronghold. Our host explains that he is not responsible for the wall-paper, and has, in fact, left the house vote much as he found it, with his horse and his goat living under the same roof, in fact, in the next room but one to himself. Cows are not good stock at La Sainte Campagne, as cows require grass, and herbage is scarce on that sunournt shore. The old house, says M. A VEGETARIAN CONVERAZIONE. (Uaily Chronicle).

If it be possible for mankind to subsist entirely-upon vegetarian fare, certainly the present is the best season of the year, in which to try the experiment, when flesh meat is not always of the freshest kind, and prime. The "Order of Danielites," a vegetarian society formed after the model of secret 'societies, with a pledge enjoining abstinence from fish, flesh, fowl, alcohol, and tobacco, was therefore wise in inviting the public to "a grand conversazione" at the present time, and in taking the opportunity of demonstrating the advantages of adopting a vegetarian course of diet. The rendezvous was at 40 Brunswick Square, in which the first branch of the order. " The Garden of Eden," meets periodically, the residence of Lieutenant Richardson. Gardeners were present in their working clothes (wearing their regalia of a yellow and green sash), and spread upon a larger billiard table were refreshments of various descriptions, of which at intervals the guests were invited to partake: A Mr Clark, a fresh-coloured and vigorous-looking young vegetarian, was placed in the chair, and superintended the proceedings with much geniality, and the first speaker was a Miss Shipman, who told the audience that she had been a vegetarian for the space of twelve months, and that she had reaped so much benefit from it that she strongly recommended it to others. For a long time she had suffered greatly from indigestion, and had tried everything in the way of tonics, but nothing bad cured her except vegetarianism. Instead of always feeling a sinking and requiring refreshments and stimulants five or six times a day, she was now content with two meals a day, though | lucky Hadjie, and the usual standing reshe admitted she generally had three. vegetarianism were adopted by the ladies, the capture of the brute. there would, she said, be fewer dranken husbands, the housekeeping expenses would be less, and there would be no kitchen tendent of Police to "tankap itu boya,"drudges. Another recess was then declared for refreshment and conver sation, during which those present were requested to send up any questions for answer by the chairman. This was freely done, and amongst the questions dealt with was one, "Are there any fat vegetarians (laughter), as there are none present." Th chairman deprecated the idea that a large amount of fat was necessary to health, bu gave several instances of well-known vegetarians who were blessed (or otherwise) with. an undue degree of corpulence. Another questioner desired to know if some means could not be devised to introducing vegetarian cookery into the schools of cookery that are being established in various parts of the country. The chairman stated that he thought the question was one which the Denielites might well discuss when in session, with a view to taking some action thereupon; and a visitor added that recently, at the Exeter School of Cookery, an evening was specially devoted to that purpose. Some one, evidently fond of statistics, was anxious to know the proportion of vegetarians to non-vegetarians present, and what was the average duration of their practice. This, of course, could not be answered on the spur of the moment, but during the interval of a song, Lieutenant Richardson, by inquiry amongst the company, ascertained that the oldest vegetarian had been so for twenty-five years, the youngest six weeks, and that the average

THE POTTSTOWN TRAGEDY.

This terrible event is thus described by the New York Times :- Just after the beginning of Lent two young men came to Pottstown and announced that they were the sole owners of a new process of restoring brilliancy and softness to back hair. no matter what might be its age or condition. They began their operations by distributing to every house in the town printed circulars, setting forth their business. and naming a ridiculously low price for their services. In this circular it was promised that the longest switches should be renovated for 10 cents each, while the charge for renovating curls and "fronts" was even lower. The ladies of Pottstown were assured that the process of renovation should be conducted with the utmost secrecy, and it would require in no case more than three days. Copies of alleged letters signed by Mrs. Anthony, Mrs. Clara Morris, President Hayes, and Miss Clara Louise Kellogg. certifying that their back hair had been renovated to their complete satisfaction. were annexed to the circular, and there was not a woman in all Pottstown who did not fully believe that she was exceptionally fortunate in having the circular brought to her attention. The next day the two young men, each carrying a large covered basket. called at every house to receive orders and back hair. They had printed receipts with them, which they gave in exchange for hair, and which had an extremely genuine and business-like appearance. Before they had visited one quarter of the houses their baskets were full, and they were obliged to return to their hotel and to empty them before taking a fresh start. Judging from the size of their baskets, a local scientific person has estimated that they collected a ton and a half of back hair in the course of two days. There was not so we are assured—a woman in Pottatown who did not trust her hair to these audapious wretches, with the excention of a few ladies of African descent: and each one believed that, within three days at the furthest, she would receive back her cherished looks in a greatly improved condition. For several days after the back hair of Pottstown had thus been placed in the keeping of the pretended hair renovators no ladies were visible on the Pottstown streets. At the same time. every lady at whose house any young man ventured to make a call was either "en-A correspondent sends us (Straits Times) | gaged " or "ill," and declined to rethe following account of a recent tragedy ceive visitors.
